1 ①In the middle of the twentieth century, the Egyptian government thought about building a new dam. ②What they wanted to do was to control floods and provide electricity and water for farming. ③However, there were problems. ④They knew that the water would rise and flood the valley for several hundred kilometers, and that many farmers living there would have to be moved. ⑤Another problem was that the rising water would cover some of Egypt's greatest monuments. ⑥The most important of these were the temples of Abu Simbel.

2 ⑦Which is more important, people or monuments? ⑧The Egyptian government and UNESCO tried to solve the problem. ⑨Could they build a dam and save Abu Simbel at the same time? ⑩After much thought and many meetings, it was decided to build the new dam. ⑪The work on the dam began on January 9, 1960. ⑫The water began to rise. ⑬There was little time left.
